Farm And Home News From Over Kentucky

Morgan county farmers are giving special attention to poultry culling, according to a report of County Agent R. B. Rankin. More than 35 of them were taught the method of distinguishing between the layers and loafers in their flocks by attending three demonstrations recently held in the county.

Fulton county farmers will give more attention to orcharding in an effort to increase their farm profits, according to reports coming from the county. Ten model home orchards will be planted this fall under the direction of O. L. Cunningham, county agent, while 15 farmers will prune and spray their orchards according to recommendations made by the extension division of the College of Agriculture.

Farmers in the Parksville community, Boyle county, cooperating with County Agent C. L. Taylor are planning to organize a farmers' club in order to carry out a program of community development. Ten charter members of the club will start lines of work designed to improve agricultural conditions in that section.

The movement to replace scrub sires with purebred ones is progressing rapidly in Oldham county, according to a report of County Agent U. B. Nance. A majority of the farmers have agreed to use nothing but purebred sires in all their breeding work.

Eleven members of the Clay county pig club have received their animals and started to develop them as their club project, according to a report of County Agent Thomas Keith. Those who have received pigs include John Johnson, David Turner, Lowell Massey, Maymie Garland, William Johnson, Elizabeth Cress, Owen Brimmon, Mildred Brimmon, Myrtle Brimmon, Emma J. Hagan and Homer Jackson.

Culling was the means of removing 12 loafer hens from the flock of Mrs. R. H. Elder, Crittenden county, according to a report of County Agent John R. Spencer. Six days after the culling the 12 hens had not produced an egg.

Poultry Pests Are Most Serious In Fall Season.

At this season of the year nothing retards the development of pullets more seriously and reduces the production of mature hens more rapidly than lice and mites, according to poultry specialists at the College of Agriculture. The body lice found on poultry can be readily controlled by rubbing a piece of blue ointment the size of a navy bean on the skin of the fowls about an inch below the vent the specialists say. Care should be taken to see that the rooster is not overlooked for the male bird which retains these pests can reinfest the entire flock in a few days.

Sodium fluoride also may be used to control the lice if a pinch is placed on the skin under each wing, on the neck, on the breast, on each thigh and in the fluff below the vent. The bird should be held upside down and the material placed next the skin if it is to accomplish the desired results. Cleaning the poultry house and spraying it thoroughly with a five per cent solution of crude oil or stock dip will be helpful in killing the mites that hide in the crevices and cracks. The roosts should be painted with a full strength solution early in the morning so that they will be dry by roosting time.

Pimples Denote Waste Products In The Blood

So Do Blackheads, Boils and Similar Skin Disorders.

The human system is forever striving to get rid of the waste products. It is a life-work which goes on forever. When waste products get in the blood, they cause lowered vitality. As a result, we become subject to many painful and embarrassing ailments.

When these symptoms appear, Nature is warning us. To throw off the waste products, the blood must be purified. Don't clog your blood. Just clean it out. Nature will do the rest. Pure, rich, red blood nourishes the body and fights off disease.

S. S. S., the standard blood purifier and system builder, is the ideal remedy for skin eruptions. The effect of S. S. S. is to rid the system of the waste products which are causing the trouble. For over 50 years S. S. S. has proven to be of unusual merit. Begin taking S. S. S. today and write for 50 page illustrated booklet, "Facts About the Blood"—free.

American Legion News

A former soldier, jobless and with a wife and five children to support, had 50 offers of employment when his case became known to Kansas City citizens. Sleeping on the floor because he had no bed, the service man was roused early by a rush of calls from the American Legion's employment bureau where he had registered only the day before.

Whether to wear brown derbies or corn-stalk shirts is a question puzzling members of the Iowa delegation to the American Legion meeting at Kansas City this month. All are agreed that they should wear something distinctive. More than 1,000 Iowans will attend the convention.

One hundred aliens manning the Shipping Board's fleet at Camp Eustis, Va., have been discharged and their places filled with unemployed American seamen following representations of the American Legion of the state. The fleet now consists of 320 vessels in charge of skeleton crews and 300 more ships will be added soon.

An aerial express for delegates and visitors to the national convention of the American Legion at Kansas City will be operated by members of the Minneapolis (Minn.) Aero Club. They will use their own planes for the trip.

Holding that his opportunity for service was greater in his new capacity, Clarence W. Seymour, Hartford, Conn., sent in his resignation as state senator immediately after he had been elected commander of the American Legion of Connecticut. The Legion forbids its officials to hold political elective office.

To assist the few surviving members of the Confederate Veterans' association in Tennessee to attend their annual reunion at Chattanooga, 20 men of Nashville post of the American Legion devoted a day each to raising a fund to defray their expenses.

Five thousand wireless stations forming a network from coast to coast are receiving nightly bulletins of information concerning the forthcoming national convention of the American Legion. A sending set with a range of 1,500 miles flashes the news from Kansas City at 8:30 o'clock each night and members of the Western Radio Company, most of them Legion men of army wireless experience, pick up the stories for their local newspapers.

From eight to ten cents a day for meals and a bed is the rate in a hotel just opened in Des Moines, Ia., by Sheriff W. E. Robb, who does it for jobless ex-service men in addition to his other duties. Only cards supplied by the American Legion and trades and labor assembly of the city will admit guests.

Gas on the battlefield and gas in the hold of an immigrant ship are of different quality, according to war veterans of both experiences. The American Legion employment bureau, New York, on receiving a call from the immigration authorities of the port for "veterans of combat service" sent 12 overseas to the docks. They were to don gas masks and fumigate ships, the work to last a month. Declaring they had faced death once the men gave up and started looking for another job. Five hundred ex-service men who played their old part as movie superns at Mamaroneck, N. Y., however, liked it.

Harold Wells, Petersburg, Va., blinded while serving his country during the world war, was not receiving enough from the government to keep him. Members of his American Legion post raised $1,000 in a mass meeting over which the mayor presided. They set him up in business and with their Women's Auxiliaries pledged to buy only of the veteran in his tobacco and book shop. Now he has paid off the $1,000 debt and is making a comfortable living.

Ward A. Pensyl, navy veteran of the war, is hiking from Hammond, N. J., to Pittsburgh, Pa., 400 miles, to get a job that is being held for him. He is drawing a two wheel cart containing tools and clothing. The local American Legion post sent his wife and five children on a train ahead of him. He had been out of work for months.

There is only one thing that prevents the average wife from saving money. She can't save what she doesn't get.

If the coming winter proves to be as severe as has been predicted we are in danger of losing our crop of coal barons. They will all become princes.

Pancho Villa says that neither the United States nor the Mexican government can take that absconding Chicago banker away from him. At any rate, we are inclined to believe that neither of them will—as long as there are any pickings for Pancho.

Some means should be found of putting the unemployed back to work again before the winter sets in. If there is any work the government wants done it should begin now. The same is true of the states and the municipalities. Every public improvement thus started means work and food and clothing for an increased number of people this winter. The unemployed are not looking for charity. They want work.

The Mare Shows Up Faulkner

By HAROLD SINCLAIRE.

Copyright, 1921, Western Newspaper Union

Spur a horse? You're joking, sir. Yes, I wear spurs, because I ride with my heels out and my toes in, but if you'll look again, sir, you'll see that there's no rowels in them. Same way with my whip. It's rosin like for the hand, and I'd touch my horse's flank with the handle end, to signal him, but as for hitting him—why, there ain't no animal more willing than a horse, nor one with more human intelligence or more anxious to please, if you treat him right.

Yes, I suppose it is a gift, this understanding of horses. Women? Better than men, I should say—that is, some men understand horses, but pretty near every woman who likes them gets to know them. That's what I liked about Miss Millicent. Came of a horse family, Kentucky born, and what she didn't know about horses—why, she'd talked horse since she was a baby, and her father, Colonel Emery, owned the finest stud in Lexington. Miss Millicent was brought up with the idea that a man who couldn't ride was only half masculine. And riding's more than sticking on and waving the reins up and down or clicking to say "go faster."

I guess that click was what first put me wise to Faulkner. Finely made man he was, fine clothes, though some what flashy to my taste, and Miss Millicent certainly took to him.

And so mister, when I heard Faulkner clicking under his breath to Beauty, I said to myself: "You'd be more in place driving a butcher's wagon than taking Miss Millicent riding."

He rode Beauty on the curb—her as wouldn't have hurt a fly, so sweet-tempered she was and gentle. And her mouth! Lord, he sawed like a butcher! Miss Millicent had been sweet on young Mr. Drew, and he on her, before Faulkner appeared on the scene.

I couldn't see Faulkner hurting Beauty and cutting out Mr. Drew without taking some steps to stop him. I puzzled a long time over it. I see Mr. Drew getting madder and madder. I went into town to see the circus one night and who should I meet at the tent door but my old friend Jim Haynes with his trick mare. It seemed like Providence.

"I can't sell you Nancy," he said. "But I'll lend her to you. What's the game?"

When I told him he swore he wouldn't take any money. It was as good as a play, he said, and he hoped I'd tell him all about it the next day. "Can't let you have Beauty today, sir," I told Mr. Faulkner the next morning. "She's a little off her feed, quiet as a babe and fit for a lady."

"Mr. Drew," says I that same morning, "if you was to take a little ride out to Holmes' Height about eleven o'clock, maybe it wouldn't come amiss."

He grinned. "I don't quite follow you, but I'm on, Hickey," he says. And so I saddled my little mare and rode out with Miss Millicent and Faulkner, and fell behind, as a groom ought to when his young lady has a beau.

I fell a good ways behind that day, and when we reached Holmes' Height they had disappeared over the rise. I knew Faulkner would just about have got up courage to try his spurs by the time the trick mare was wimled. And sure enough, hardly had I got to the top when I heard Miss Millicent screaming—not with fear, but with laughter.

There sat Faulkner, clinging to the mare's neck with both hands, his feet working like windmills, and the little mare going round and round and round in a lot as big as a circus ring. His coat tails was flying, and he was swearing and hollering, and presently he flew over the mare's neck and she stopped stock still and watched him land in a pool of the stickiest mud anywhere in the neighborhood. And just at that minute Mr. Drew comes riding along and stops and picks Faulkner out of the mire. But he wouldn't get on the mare's back any more. So Mr. Drew sees Miss Millicent home, and Faulkner and I follows, me leading the mare and him walking. But I noticed Miss Millicent and Mr. Drew leaning inward on their saddles again like they used to.

That's all, sir, except this gold watch Mrs. Drew gave me the day they were married. "I understand, Hickey," she said to me. And what do you think she did? If she didn't put her hands in mine and cry with happiness. Yes, me, sir. I'm her head coachman now, but when Miss May gets a little older I'm going to take her riding and teach her to handle horses. You see, it comes out in the blood, mister.

Big Turtles on Ascension Island.

Ascension Island, a small strip of land in the South Atlantic ocean, 700 miles northwest of St. Helena, is a resort for sea turtles, which come in thousands to lay their eggs in the sand annually between January and May. In 1914 more than one hundred, weighing from five hundred to eight hundred pounds each, were caught and stored in ponds and eventually killed and distributed among the people. The island has an area of 34 square miles and a population of 250 persons. It is under the control of the local commissioners of the admiralty of Great Britain and is fortified. Ten acres are under cultivation, producing vegetables and fruit for the garrison.

Let Pride

Begin At Home.

We all take pride in our country because it is a great country—the greatest of them all.

But what constitutes this country?

The forests, and the fields, and the mountains, and the valleys, and the prairies, and the lakes, and the rivers, and the hamlets, and the villages, and the towns, and the cities, and all of the human and other life that exists therein and thereon.

This town is a part of this country, and our pride of country should extend to the community in which we live.

Our individual homes are a part of this town, and our pride of country and town should begin with the homes in which we live.

If we make them as near perfection as our resources will permit, then the town and the state and the country reflects the warmth and the glory of our firesides.

We look at the big cities and marvel at their immensity—at their wealth, and their enterprise, and their growth.

But do we remember that before these cities became great they were small, even as we are?

Their citizens saw the opportunities that were before them, and were quick to grasp them. Pride in their improvements impelled them to press onward and make other and greater ones.

As the giant oaks sprung from little acorns, so have these great cities sprung from what were once little hamlets and villages—often from barren wastes of land.

But they did not spring up of their own accord.

The people of the tiny hamlets took pride in their homes, and their surroundings, and worked to make them better and more prosperous. It is this stalwart quality of thrift and energy that has made them what they are today—metropolitan centers of population and commerce which are known all over the civilized world.

And the root of it all was pride.

Few things are impossible to a people who have the will to accomplish. But without the will to perform no great endings will come from little beginnings.

Let us consider the future of this town—but let us begin with pride in the home, and the improvements we may make therein.

Today we are small, but there is always a tomorrow—and tomorrow is ever flowing with new hopes of advancement and achievement.

Our geographical situation is such that we may never become a great city, but it does not prevent the possibility of making of our home town a paradise in which to live.

Pride in the home has done it for other towns.

It can do it for ours.

Why not?

They Do Speed.

If by chance you imagine that our American women are lacking in speed, your imagination is clearly at fault.

Speed is one of their many long suits. In fact, they are becoming so speedy the men are gasping in amazement and consternation over the possibilities of the next fifty years.

Only a few years ago we laughed at the "absurd idea" of any woman ever being allowed to vote or hold public office on a par with men. But they are doing it now, and it doesn't seem to have sent either the country or the people to the bow-wows.

Now the women are preparing to have congress amend the constitution in such a manner that they will be given equal rights and privileges and be placed on a par with man in every respect and in all things. In other words, if they are successful in their present undertaking the matter of sex will disappear entirely so far as it relates to rights, privileges and responsibilities.

That would mean the eligibility of woman to become mayors, governors, congressmen, senators, judges, and even president of the United States.

No doubt the opposition will do some more laughing at their "presumption," but the laughter will not be so long, or loud, or hearty.

Because, you know, we have the most charming, intelligent and progressive women in the world, and when they make up their minds to do a thing they just simply speed up, and—it's done.

Prepare For

A Cold One.

An extremely cold winter is predicted—more severe than any we have had for many years past, they say.

If such be the case it would be wise for our home people to make preparation for it in advance, not only that our families may live in comfort, but that live stock and poultry may not suffer.

It would be well to go over the barns and poultry houses and close up all cracks and holes where the air could drift through, with the exception of the ventilation space, and that should be covered with canvas. A poultry house lined with tarpaper would be vastly warmer and the egg yield would be much more satisfactory.

With depressed business conditions prevailing generally it would be the height of folly to allow an extreme winter to render them worse when a little forethought and energy will provide against such a possibility.

Do it before the cold weather comes.

We Don't Know.

The chief of police of Chicago says one-half of the policemen in that city are booze runners or bootleggers or engaged in some manner in the illicit handling of booze.

Conditions may be as loose in other cities—but we don't know.

They may be as bad in the less populated parts of the country—but still we don't know.

Even the man we meet on the street may have a flask in his pocket—and again we don't know.

But we do know that in the enforcement of prohibition Uncle Sam is up against the hardest job of his whole career.

It has been the boast of the proud old gentleman that he has never yet met defeat.

He may make good that boast in the present case, but—

Candidly, it will be a long time before we ever know.

Election Officers Appointed For Election November 8th.

The election commission, composed of A. K. Walker, chairman, A. L. Sanders, Republican Commissioner, and J. Hogan Ballard, Democratic Commissioner, met and named the officers to serve in the various precincts in Garrard county, as set out below. It will be the duty of these persons named to be present at the precinct in which they are to serve by six o'clock on November 8th, and act in the capacity for which they are selected. Under 1579 of the Kentucky Statutes it is a fine of from $25.00 to $500.00 for any one who fails, without good cause, to perform these duties. In the various counties of Kentucky this law is being rigidly enforced. The Lexington Leader makes this editorial comment in its issue of October 1st: Officers of election also conduct the registration.

It should be remembered that last year quite a number of registration and election officers failed to report for duty. They were indicted and prosecuted. Some of them were fined.

The courts have found it necessary to enforce the law relating to election officers. Elections must be held and officers must serve at the polls. It is a duty which must fall more or less upon every man some time.

It is cheaper to respond to the summons than it is to defend one's self against an indictment for violation of a statute.

Sheriff A. K. Walker, will give written notice to each of these persons named in order that there may not be any mistake or oversight in the performance of his duty and the onus-Nonala ca 3774 3775 3776 3777 3778 Mrs. John Gill Kinnaird, Mrs. G. A. Abbott, Mrs. W. A. Dickerson, Mrs. J. L. Williams, Mrs. Wm. Carson, Mrs. Fawcett, Mrs. C. E. Guley, Mrs. Gus Dunn, Mrs. Harry Anderson, Mrs. J. W. Palmer, Mrs. I. G. Davidson, Mrs. Lucy Bellow, Mrs. Dave Thomas, Mrs. H. S. Hatfield, Miss Ruth Carrier, Miss Iva Lee Smith, Miss Bernice Champ, Miss Sallie Lou Myers, Miss Mary Davis, Miss Joyce Syler, Miss Christine Sanders, Miss Westover, Miss Katie Barnes, Mrs. Dickerson, Miss Griffith, Miss Mildred Hazley, Miss Lucretia Skinner, Miss Burdett, Miss Lizzie Pettis, Miss Amanda Anderson and Miss Rich.

DR. JACK CASEY To Instruct Polo At Louisville New Athletic Club.

The following from the Louisville Post of recent date will be of interest to friends of Dr. Casey of this city, as well as to sportsmen throughout the State:

The best golf course in the South is the ambition of the Kentucky Country and Centre Club, just organized, which is to build its club and links eight miles out on the Eighteenth-street road.

The club has bought a 375 acre tract out on the Grell car line this side of Drell. It runs from the car line to the river. Polo, swimming, tennis and trap shooting will also be incorporated into the club's program of play.

The club membership will be limited to 500. Dr. A. R. Weaver, who is helping to organize the club, says that a membership of 100 has already been enrolled.

"We are going to specialize on a real golf course," said Dr. Weaver, "instead of a fancy club-house. It will be the longest course in the State, and will be everything that a golf links should be. Our club-house will be built of logs."

The rustic clubhouse will contain dining and dance halls. Other buildings will include two and three-room cottages for week-enders; a stable for polo ponies, a riding hall and a grand stand for the polo field. Tennis courts, a shooting range and a swimming pool are included.

Dr. J. M. Casey, Danville, is to be in charge of the development of polo at the club. He has played abroad with the Sixth Division, and owns a string of polo ponies. The links will consist of an eighteen hole course and a nine-hole course for women and beginners. "Steaming," a new process that gets rid of weeds in a few hours, will be the treatment given the greens.

Some people are always preaching about the wickedness of this world. But perhaps the subject is too enticing for them to see the better side.

Me-o-my,
how you'll take to a pipe—and P. A.!

Before you're a day older you want to let the idea slip under your hat that this is the open season to start something with a joy'us jimmy pipe—and some Prince Albert!

Because, a pipe packed with Prince Albert satisfies a man as he was never satisfied before—and keeps him satisfied! And, you can prove it! Why—P. A.'s flavor and fragrance and coolness and its freedom from bite and parch (cut out by our exclusive patented process) are a revelation to the man who never could get acquainted with a pipe! P. A. has made a pipe a thing of joy to four men where one was smoked before!

Ever roll up a cigarette with Prince Albert? Man, man—but you've got a party coming your way! Talk about a cigarette smoke; we tell you it's a peach!

PRINCE ALBERT
the national joy smoke

Prince Albert is sold in happy red tins, red and blue, handsome round and flat, round tin tins, and in the grand crystal glass tins, with a sponge mulliner top.

LIVE STOCK

NOT WISE TO OVERLOAD CARS

Death or Injury of Animals Means Heavy Loss to Shipper—Temptation to Crowd Is Great.

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.)

It makes quite a difference in the profits of the farmer stock raiser whether he obtains 85 cents per pound for his hogs as meat or from 15 to 18 cent per pound for them as dead hogs and scrapie material. Which of these prices he obtains depends upon how the animals are loaded in the cars. Many shippers, either through ignorance or in an effort to save a small amount of freight, overload or improperly load their live stock when sending it to market, and thereby run great risks of sustaining serious losses through crippled or dead animals, say specialists of the bureau of markets, United States Department of Agriculture.

With freight rates at their present levels there is a strong temptation to economize on this item of expense by crowding a few more animals into an already well-filled car. Representatives of the department, however, who see thousands of carcasses of live stock unloaded at the great central markets are of the opinion that if farmers and stockmen could see the condition in which much of the live stock reaches the stockyards they would be impressed not only with the folly of overloading, but also with the absolute necessity of taking every precaution against injury and death of the animals while in transit.

Overloading is one of the commonest and at the same time most serious mistakes made by the inexperienced or careless shipper. It seems such an easy matter to crowd just a few more animals into a car and the fact that once in a great while an overloaded car will go through without serious mishap seems to urge the shipper on to tempt fate just once more. The wise shipper, however, will have nothing to do with this false economy, say specialists of the department. He will lay down a hard and fast rule to load only as many animals in the cars as can ride comfortably, and from this rule he will not deviate.

The chances of loss through overloading are greater in warm weather than in cold. Temperatures may be such at the time of loading that the animals are fairly comfortable, but before they reach market the weather turns suddenly hot, with the result

Farmers To Determine Best Wheat Varieties

In order to determine the best varieties of wheat for different sections of Kentucky 47 farmers in 18 counties of the State are starting wheat variety demonstrations this fall in cooperation with their county agents and the extension division of the College of Agriculture. The demonstrations are scattered from Fulton to Boyd and from Carroll to Todd counties being located in Fulton, Ballard, Livingston, Crittenden, Todd, Muhlenburg, Hopkins, Webster, Henderson, Warren, Hart Taylor, Marion, Washington, Pulaski, Carroll, Campbell and Boyd counties. This is the first year that demonstrations of this kind have been conducted, according to corps specialists of the college.

The varieties used in the demonstrations will include Ashland, the new variety developed at the Kentucky Agricultural Experiment Station and the highest yielder there, Kanred, the famous hard wheat from Kansas, Fulcaster and Currell's Profile. These will be grown and harvested with a portion of the crop from the variety grown in each section. It is expected that the leading variety for each section of the State can be selected after from three to five years of this work.

A Boy With a Fortune

A boy with a fortune is the boy who has one hundred dollars that he himself has saved. His fortune consists not only of the money saved—and what boy with a hundred dollars would not feel like a millionaire?—but of a valuable lesson learned.

Not only has he experienced the thrill of possession, but he has caught the thrift habit. He has learned to do without useless things. He no longer squanders his money. He has better judgment of values. He is doubtless a far better boy.

Rye Cover Crop Protects Tobacco Field Fertility.

Nearly one-half million acres of Kentucky tobacco land, the richest in the State, will be depleted of their fertility during the coming winter unless rye or some other crop is sown as soon as the tobacco crop is removed to protect the soil during the winter from erosion and leaching, crops specialists at the College of Agriculture say. Rye sown at the rate of one bushel an acre as soon as the tobacco is removed makes a good protection for the soil while a still better cover crop may be obtained by adding 20 pounds of vetch seed to each bushel of rye and sowing this mixture at the rate of one bushel and 20 pounds an acre. The combination will make not only a soil saver but also a green manure to plow under next April for soil improvement.

The tobacco field in general is prepared and tilled as carefully as the garden, the specialists say, with the result that little grass or weeds have an opportunity of growing on them. In the fall of the year these fields are mellow and clean and as soon as the tobacco is removed are smooth surfaces where fall and winter rains start rivulets that later grow into gullies which remove the fertile surface. Losses of this kind are among the heaviest ones suffered by farmers of the State, according to the specialists.

that anywhere from one to 12 animals suffocate. This is particularly true of hogs. The shipper should remember that stock cars frequently stand in freight yards completely hemmed in by trains of box cars. Under such circumstances, if the animals are crowded in the car and the weather is hot, overheated and dead animals are almost certain to result.

Another mistake frequently made is to load mixed stock without proper partitions. When two or more species of live stock are shipped in the same car they should generally be kept separate by building strong partitions. This is particularly important when large animals are shipped with smaller ones.

It has been found that shipping live animals any considerable distance is an undertaking always fraught with some risk. This risk, however, may be materially reduced, in the opinion of department specialists.

The exact number of animals that should be shipped in a car, naturally, varies with the size of the car, the size and kind of animals, the length of haul, the season of the year, and weather conditions. There can be no variation, however, in the general rule that the animals should have sufficient room to be reasonably comfortable and that the car should be so partitioned that large animals cannot trample the smaller ones, and that aggressive and quarrelsome animals can not injure those with a more quiet and timid disposition.

Even at the present comparatively low price of live stock a single dead or crippled animal invariably represents a substantial loss, and in many instances wipes out the profit on the entire shipment.

FARM STOCK

KEEP PRODUCERS INFORMED

Farmers Advised to Study Market Reports in and Out of Season to Keep Posted

(Presented by the U. S. Department of Agriculture)

How can the farmer and stock raiser keep up with the live stock reports of the Bureau of Markets, United States Department of Agriculture, into dollars is frequently asked.

The answer is for the farmer to get so much information out of the reports that he can conduct his breeding, feeding and marketing operations a little more intelligently in the future, and therefore more profitably than in the past.

Market reports are history, and the chief value of history is the lesson which it provides on which to base the future. In other words, what has happened in the past will probably occur again under the same or similar circumstances.

Small livestock is generally derived from feeding a single market report, or one covering a short period of time. Markets move in cycles, and the man who would keep informed must follow them diligently all season and out. This is a matter of particular importance to the stockman, because his business is, in an unusual degree, a long-time speculation. He must prepare now and lay his plans today in light of what he thinks the market will be somewhere from six months to a year hence. But how will the department's reports assist him in doing this?

First of all, he should take into account potential supplies of the particular class of live stock in which he is interested. Assume that cattle is his line. The monthly report, Stock at Stockyards, gives the number of cattle and calves marketed from month to month through 48 central markets. If such movements are unusually heavy for any considerable time, it may indicate a cattle shortage during the next year or two, and a shortage of any commodity usually means higher prices.

This same report also shows the number of cattle and calves that went back to the country as stockers and feeders. If such movements were exceptionally light, it would help to confirm the belief that a comparative shortage in cattle was impending. On the other hand, heavy stocker and feeder shipments would go a long way toward neutralizing the importance of

Fall Army Worm Outbreak Is Causing Heavy Damage

Lexington, Ky. With new outbreaks being reported almost daily, fall army worms, which resemble the common spring army worms, are continuing to cause damage to field crops of all kinds in the State, according to additional warnings sent out by Harrison Garman, entomologist at the Kentucky Agricultural Experiment Station. County Agents and farmers in all Kentucky counties have been warned to be on the outlook for the pests and take immediate steps to control them as soon as they make their appearance.

The most serious outbreaks of the pests have been reported from Carroll, Washington, Woodford, Scott and Fayette counties. In Carroll county corn fields were attacked by the pests, in many cases the blades being riddled and the worms working their way down among the rolled blades of the late plantings in a manner similar to that of the corn-eating worm. In Washington county various kinds of vegetation were attacked by the worms while in Fayette county rye and barley were the objects of attack. The insects are particularly fond of Hungarian millet, rye and alfalfa with the result that acres of these crops are sometimes ruined, according to the warning.

The insects appear so suddenly that most farmers are unprepared to cope with them, Mr. Garman said. Spraying field crops is only practicable if the insects occur in restricted areas in which case they may be sprayed with a solution made of one and one-half pounds of arsenate of lead powder in a barrel of water. Livestock should be kept off the sprayed areas for a time following the application, according to Mr.

Garman, in order to prevent possibilities of poisoning. The worms may be burned out by the use of scattered straw or other dry material sprinkled with coal oil while the use of a roller on infested land before the insects disappear into the ground is sometimes the only remedy. When a brood goes into the ground for pupation plowing to break up the earth in rows and expose them to the birds and poultry is sometimes helpful in controlling the insects. The species appears to be incompletely acclimated to Kentucky and as far as is known is only a summer visitor, cold weather apparently killing those left in the soil by the latest broods.

The insects which have just made their appearance are different pests from the common army worms, being distinguished from them by the yellow V-shaped mark on the front of the head. Mr. Garman said. They also are darker in color than the spring army worms. According to the warning, the fall army worms come from farther South during hot summers and become established and injurious in Kentucky during the fall. Although they appear late there is evidence showing that more than one brood appears before cold weather arrives and kills them. The first may appear as early as Aug. 6 and by the middle of Sept. a second brood has sometimes appeared. A third sometimes appears in Kentucky as late as October if the weather remains mild.

the heavy receipts, for the stockman would know that most of these cattle going back to the country must be returned to market during the next few weeks or months and enter consumption channels.

Having established in this fashion a broad basis for his operations, let us assume the stockman is feeding a lot of steers for the market. He must now give market reports more careful and persistent attention than before. It is quite important that he know what kind of cattle are in best demand on the principal markets. If there is a steady inquiry for heavy finished cattle and that kind are selling at a premium over lighter weights, it will probably pay him to "feed his cattle out," unless the cost of feed is exceptionally high.

If, however, consumptive demand seems to be drifting steadily toward lighter retail cuts of meat, or because of general business depression or some other cause, is centering chiefly on the lower and cheaper grades, he may find it more profitable to market his cattle at an earlier age and before they have attained great weight.

Abundant information along this line will be found both in the live stock market reports and the reports dealing with meat-trade conditions in the large consuming centers.

In this connection the stockman will also be interested in keeping advised as to whether the slaughter of meat is increasing or decreasing and whether the movement applies equally to all classes of meat, or whether slaughter of beef is decreasing while that of some other class is increasing. This information is obtainable from the statistical report covering the live stock and meat situation, which is based on the federal meat-inspection reports of the bureau of animal industry and is also published monthly by the bureau of markets.

DRIVE SLOW

You Might Meet A Fool

The Owensboro Messenger makes the following wise comment: On a road at the foot of the Rockies is a sign that reads "Hanger Sharp Curve—You Might Meet a Fool." Such a sign is calculated to make a driver set up and take notice. The latter sees at almost every sharp turn a notice to proceed with caution, or to blow his horn, and comes to be little impressed by them. He has confidence in his ability to avoid running into another car. But if there is a fool in the other car the efforts of the most skillful driver to escape a collision may be futile. There would be far fewer automobile mishaps if every driver would bear constantly in mind the possibility that there may be a fool ahead, not only on sharp curves, but on stretches of straight road. It is unwise to assume that each car on the highway is in charge of an experienced driver who knows the traffic rules and will obey them. You may think that needless as you are keeping on your side of the road there is no danger of running your car at high speed. But you might meet a fool who will not stick to his side of the road.

The fool whom you might meet is not necessarily another driver. He may be a pedestrian. Hearing in mind at all times that there are slow-witted folk in the world, who may be found in all places, and that there is a possibility that you may encounter one you will not be so likely to meet with mishaps as if you took it for granted that all persons are level-headed and know enough to keep out of harm's way.

Many a self-made man is tailor made as well.

Making Extraordinary Mileage a Certainty

Car Owners want more rubber on the tread where the wear is hardest; more gum between cord plies to perfect a resilient and powerful carcass. And they want a scientifically constructed Non Skid tread with all angles and contacts to resist skidding and give sure traction. Firestone Cord Tires have met these demands of the car owners.

Records from 29,000 to 57,000 Miles

Cord Tires built the Firestone way could not fail to produce mileage. Every day, from all over the country, comes the word that 10,000, 20,000 or 30,000 miles are frequent and consistent records.

Now and then they are emphasized by unusual instances such as quoted below. Performances like these demonstrate the ultimate possibilities of Firestone Cords under careful driving.

Gentlemen:—

I submit herewith the history of a 3504 Firestone Cord tire. This tire has run 57,000 miles. I have retreaded it seven times. The average mileage to each retread, being about 7,000. I think you will agree this is a remarkable record. It is especially unusual as I know the owner to be a severe driver. However, he gives his tires proper inflation. The tire in question is not yet out of service and has every indication of being sufficiently strong for another retread. I am making photographic and duplicate copies of this letter.

Gentlemen:—

It occurs to me that you might be interested in the mileage that I obtained from the set of Firestone Cord tires on my Dodge coupe. The first tire went over 28,000 miles. The second set rolled up a mileage of between 34,000 and 35,000. These were both cut considerably by chafing. The two front tires have gone better than 35,000 miles and are still in good condition. I expect to get at least 40,000 miles from each of them. I need scarcely say that the Firestone Cord will be my tire choice for the future.
